

The public road and took the mountain road, did you meet a number of people on the road?

Witness: "Before we went up the mountain road."

Mr. Bouldin: "Yes."

A. "I remember passing some people walking, once or twice I think, perhaps some colored people; some might have been white people. I don't remember passing anybody that I knew."

Q. "Do you recollect meeting with and speaking to Sidney Boye, near Rogers' gate?"

A. "No."

Q. "Now I don't want to ask you any unpleasant questions, but was your underclothing injured in any way?"

A. "No."

Q. "Did Miss Kidd help to undress you?"

A. "I suppose she undressed me entirely."

Q. "Miss Loving, did you take a drink of liquor at Bates' store before you commenced driving?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "Miss Loving, did you get a drink at Bates' store on Saturday with Miss Lee, from Chicago?"

Witness: "I don't know. I was not present at the trial, and I was not present at the trial."

Q. "Miss Loving, did you lose a glove on that ride?"

A. "I don't know. I have never seen my gloves at all since."

Q. "Did you say anything to Mr. Morris about having lost a glove on the drive?"

A. "I didn't see Mr. Morris at all."

Q. "Miss Loving, during the time after your father left home in pursuit of Mr. Bates and before he came back, whom were you with at home?"

A. "That afternoon's visitor."

A. "When he left there was nobody in the house but just mother and I, and then a friend of ours was coming down in the afternoon; she was to be there in a very little while; the train was expected, and so mother and I went out to meet her. We never did drive down to the depot. I did not want to stay in the house, of course, alone, and I went with her. We didn't drive down to the depot."

Q. "You and your mother drove over to meet Miss Caskie?"

A. "Yes, sir, with the driver."

Q. "Four miles, I believe it was?"

A. "No, that is just at our private siding down there on the place. She came with her little nephew, and then we turned back home. We were in the sitting-room, and while we were in the room Mr. Fitzpatrick came in to see father on business. The front door was open and the sitting-room door was open."

Q. "I was in the sitting-room, of course, as soon as he found father was not there he would leave at once."

Q. "Who did you say that was?"

A. "Mr. John Fitzpatrick. But he didn't leave; he stayed. I don't know exactly how long he stayed, but he was talking to mother. Then, while he was there, Miss Lizzie Brown came in. She stays at our house. She had been at school that day."

Q. "Did you spend the evening, while your father was away, with Miss Caskie, your mother and Miss Brown?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "Just casual conversation; no reference to what was happening?"

A. "No, no reference at all."

Q. "Just one other question I omitted to ask a moment ago. This attempted assault was it in the buggy or on the ground?"

A. "As far as I remember, it was in the buggy. I don't know whether I was out of the buggy at any time. My coat that I had on looked very much as if I had been out of the buggy, but I don't remember, except the signs on the coat looked as if I had been out."

Q. "I believe, Miss Loving, you are quite an accomplished horsewoman, you ride horses very well?"

A. "Yes, I ride."

Q. "You weigh about a hundred and thirty or forty pounds?"

A. "I weigh a hundred and forty."

Witness stood aside.

She was on the stand one hour and ten minutes.

Miss Loving left the stand at 3:25 o'clock. Mr. Bouldin, in his cross-examination for witness, was not present at the trial, and was not present at the trial.

There was no attempt made on the part of the prosecution to embarrass or humiliate the weeping girl, who appeared a perfect picture of woe, a pitiful creature and all that a woman holds dear in the defense of her father, giving of more than life to save him from the clutches of the strong-armed law.

Crowd Re-Enters Room.

Counsel for defense asked permission to retire, and Judge Barksdale took a recess of fifteen minutes and allowed the throng outside to enter the courtroom, after which Dr. W. M. Tunstall, of Nelson county, was called to the stand. He stated that he was thirty-eight years of age, and had been educated at the University of Virginia and in New York. He said he had had experience in mental disease, and was at Oakridge at the time of the shooting of Bates and saw Judge Loving four or five minutes before it occurred. "His general appearance had changed, and he did not seem natural," said Dr. Tunstall. He said he saw Judge Loving immediately after the shooting not three minutes after it occurred. "Judge Loving was walking down the road, with his hands in his pockets, with his head hung down, walking aimlessly. I called to him, and he did not hear me."

I called again and said to him: "Why did you do this?" He replied: "That man took my daughter out yesterday driving, and brought her in at a late hour, drugged on liquor and ruined. I said: If that is true, Judge, noody will blame you."

Witness said he had often seen Judge Loving wild with liquor, and that in 1905 in Lynchburg he had seen the prisoner in a wild condition when his mental condition was very bad. Dr. Tunstall told of an occasion when Judge Loving, under the influence of liquor, imagined that a cog had slipped in his brain. He said Judge Loving used to be pleasant and agreeable, but of recent years he had become unreasonable and self-opinionated.

Temporarily Insane, Says Doctor.

Mr. Moore asked: "Taking your knowledge of Judge Loving and seeing him as you did at the time of the shooting, what was Judge Loving's condition?" Dr. Tunstall replied: "I am firmly of the opinion that Judge Loving was laboring under such excitement and stress of mind that he did not realize the act he was committing."

On cross-examination, witness said he saw him an hour and a half after the killing, and that Judge Loving was still in a way deranged.

Witness said he never heard the sanity or insanity of the prisoner discussed until after the killing of Bates. Mr. Bouldin was very severe in his cross-examination, saying that witness was "only a country doctor," and finally getting the witness to declare that he was not an expert on insanity.

Witness insisted that Judge Loving was insane when he killed Bates, giving as a reason for his opinion the fact that Judge Loving's face was pale and changed before he committed the deed, that he did such a deed knowing full well the consequences, and that after the deed he seemed to be in a trance. He said that delirium tremens would finally break down the mental faculties. Dr. Tunstall said that when a mind was weak, a great blow would break it down.

Dr. Melvin's Hit.

Dr. H. B. Melvin, of Halifax county, was next witness called by the defense. He said he had practiced for forty-five years, and had been educated at the Medical College of Virginia, at Richmond. Witness testified that a man who had repeatedly had delirium tremens would have a weak mind, and that any great shock would affect his mental balance. On cross-examination, Dr. Melvin said he had never made mental diseases a special study, but that in his forty-five years of practice he had learned something. Dr. Melvin and Mr. Bouldin had a lively tilt, not agreeing on questions of insanity, but the old physician explained his opinion to the jury, eleven of whom are farmers, and used as an illustration the case of machinery in the harvest field. He made a great hit. As Dr. Melvin left the stand, Mr. Lee said: "You honor, we expect to close this case after two hours' session to-morrow, and I will ask you to adjourn now. The court adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow."

The house and lot was raffled by the owner, a glass-blower, who was ill in health and compelled to leave that section. Tickets of chances were sent out to all the glass-workers' unions, and Mr. Nasser, a member of the Manchester local, purchased a chance. He is now the proud possessor of a handsome $2,000 house and lot. His wife says the next thing he will attempt to do will be to win a wife.

Mr. John Baughan has purchased the property of the Bainbridge-Street Baptist Church located near Drewry's Bluff. He secured the house and boats and all paraphernalia for the sum of $200.

Revival Opens To-Night.

Owing to an unavoidable delay, Rev. A. T. Howell, who was to open revival services at Clopton-Street Baptist Church last night, failed to arrive. A telegram received yesterday stated that he would be unable to arrive in Manchester before this afternoon. He will commence his services to-night.
